SNIFFLES and MARY JANE

I THINK I'LL WRITE A STORY !!

HELLO, MARY JANE !

HELLO, SNIFFLES! I'M WRITING A STORY, BUT I DON'T KNOW HOW, TO START!

WHY DON'T YOU TRY LIVING A STORY INSTEAD OF WRITING ONE!

THAT'S A WONDERFUL IDEA! LET'S PRETEND WE'RE TWO LITTLE CHILDREN WHO WANDER INTO A KING'S CASTLE!

FINE! BUT FIRST SPRINKLE YOUR MAGIC SAND SO WE'LL BE TH' SAME SIZE!

I'LL TAKE YOU TO A GOOD PLACE TO LIVE YOUR STORY! I KNOW WHERE THERE'S A LITTLE VILLAGE WITH A CASTLE AND EVERYTHING !!

WE'RE IN A TOY STORE !!

YES! AND THERE'S TH' CASTLE FOR YOUR STORY! LET'S GO INSIDE!!

WAIT! THERE'S A BAKER WITH SOME PIES!

MAY WE HAVE ONE OF YOUR PIES ?

NO! THEY'RE FOR THE KING !

WILL HE EAT THEM ALL ?

HE NEVER EATS EVEN ONE !

LOOK! HERE'S SOMEONE ELSE!!

UMMM! WHAT SMELLS SO GOOD?

IT'S A ROASTED CHICKEN—

—FOR THE KING!

HE MUST HAVE A BIG APPETITE!

I DUNNO! HE NEVER EATS A BITE!!

THE BUTCHER AND THE BAKER ------ THIS MUST BE THE CANDLESTICK MAKER!

ARE YOU THE CANDLE-STICK MAKER?

I AM --- AND THIS CANDLE IS FOR THE KING'S SUPPER TABLE!

THIS MUST MAKE THE ROOM VERY BRIGHT!

I DARESAY IT WOULD, BUT —

HE NEVER LIGHTS THE LIGHT!

LET'S GO IN AND SEE THIS STRANGE KING!

WHY, HE'S JUST A LITTLE OLD MAN!

HOW DO YOU DO, YOUR MAJESTY!

HUMPH-H-H!

SHALL I LIGHT IT, YOUR MAJESTY?

NO! YOU'RE LATE AGAIN! TAKE IT BACK!!

YOU SEE! IT HAPPENED AGAIN!!

AGAIN?

THEY'RE OUT OF ORDER... THAT'S WHAT THEY ARE!! FIRST COMES PIE, BUT WHO WANTS TO EAT DESSERT FIRST?... SO I SEND IT BACK..

...AND A KING SHOULDN'T EAT IN THE DARK, BUT THE CANDLE ALWAYS COMES LAST! IT'S NO USE! I HAVEN'T EATEN FOR AS LONG AS I CAN REMEMBER!

CAN WE DO SOMETHING?

YES! DO SOMETHING OR I'LL THROW YOU BOTH IN PRISON FOR A THOUSAND YEARS!

A THOUSAND YEARS?!

I'LL GIVE YOU UNTIL MIDNIGHT! IF YOU HAVE DONE NOTHING, INTO PRISON YOU'LL GO!!

AND I MEAN IT!

YES, YOUR MAJESTY!

THE POOR KING'S CROSS BECAUSE HE'S SO HUNGRY, I GUESS!

WHAT'LL WE DO? HE MUST BE STARVING! BUT COOKING ISN'T IN MY LINE!

COOKING! OF COURSE! THAT'S THE ANSWER! COME ON, SNIFFLES! WE'VE WORK TO DO!

WE'LL HAVE TO BORROW SOME FLOUR AND SUGAR..

BORROW? FOR WHAT?

YOU WAIT AND SEE!

THAT COTTAGE LOOKS LIKE A GOOD ONE FOR US!

MAY WE PLEASE HAVE A CUP OF FLOUR?

THE KING SAYS HE'S GOING TO THROW US INTO PRISON FOR A THOUSAND YEARS!

HERE'S THE FLOUR, BUT IT WON'T LAST THAT LONG!

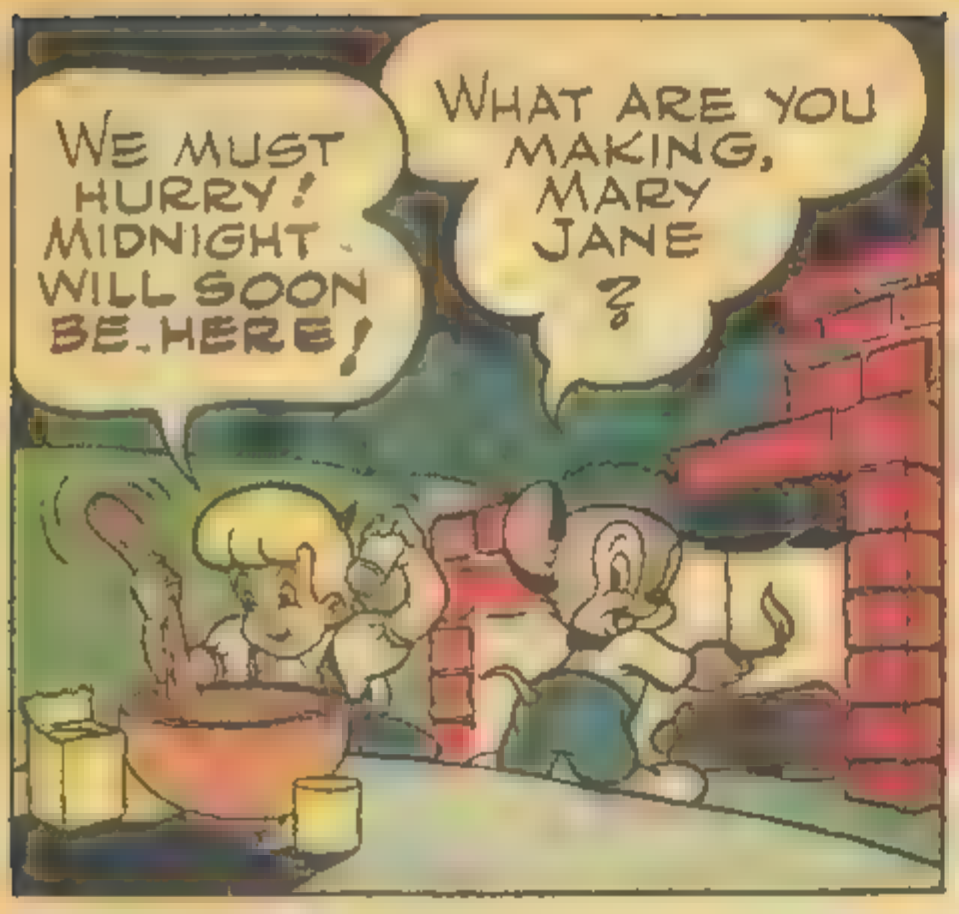
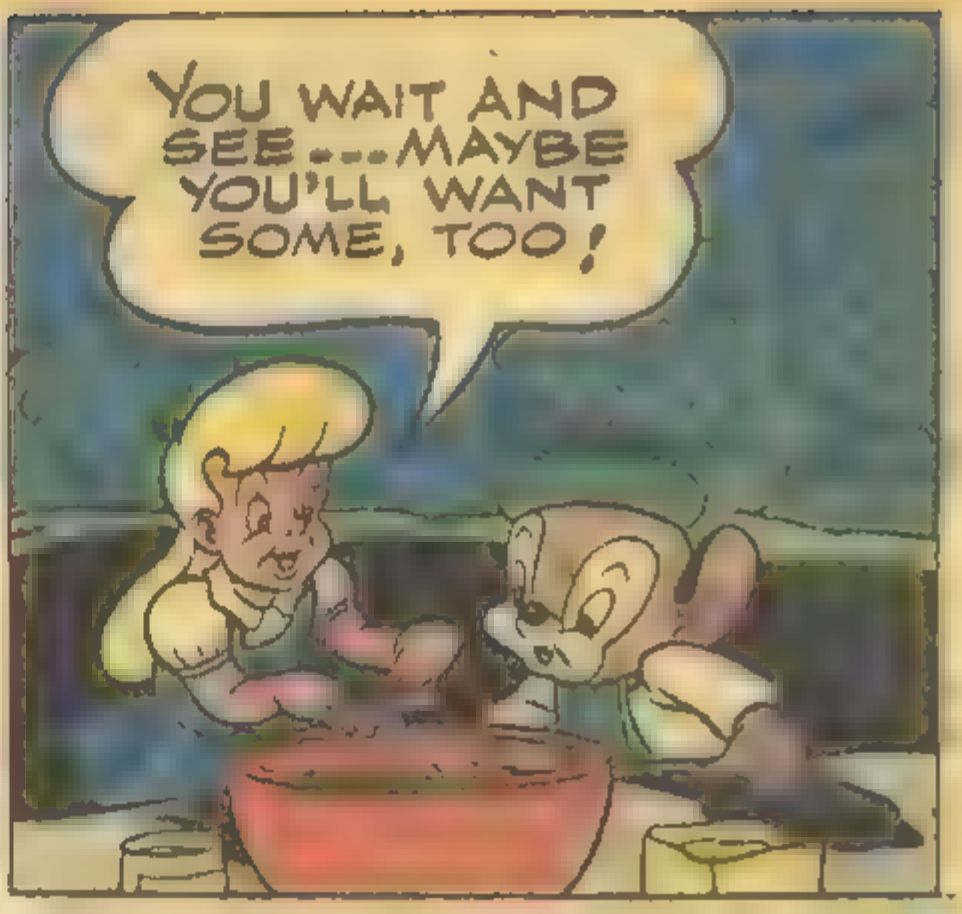
THEY GO FROM HOUSE TO HOUSE UNTIL THEY HAVE ALL THEY NEED!

NOW FIND A NICE BIG MIXING BOWL----

THEN WE'LL BUILD A FIRE HERE IN THIS PICNIC GROVE!



WE MUST HURRY! MIDNIGHT WILL SOON BE HERE!
WHAT ARE YOU MAKING, MARY JANE?

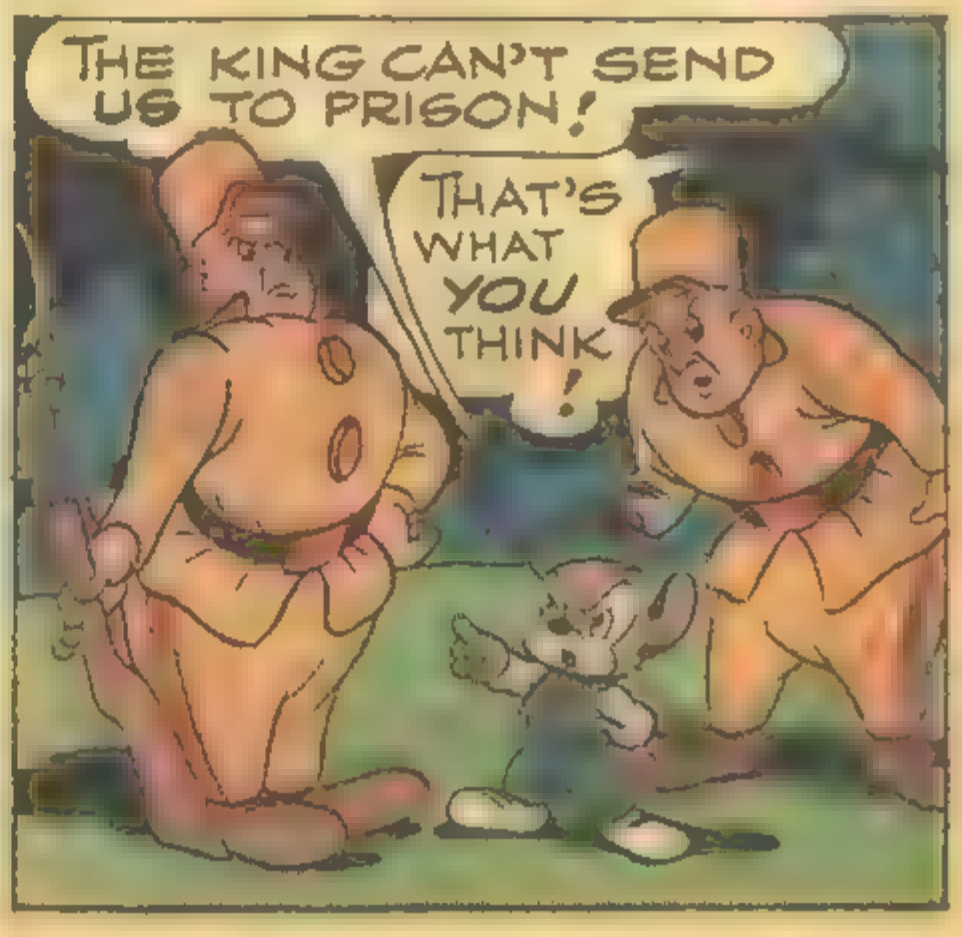


YOU WAIT AND SEE... MAYBE YOU'LL WANT SOME, TOO!

I KNOW! IT'S COOKIES!!
YES! EVEN A KING CAN EAT COOKIES BETWEEN MEALS!

THEY SMELL GOOD! I HOPE THEY'RE DONE SOON -- IT'S ALMOST MIDNIGHT NOW!
LISTEN! I HEAR SOMETHING!!

YOU ARE UNDER ARREST!



THE KING CAN'T SEND US TO PRISON!
THAT'S WHAT YOU THINK!

WAIT UNTIL I GATHER UP THESE COOKIES!

WE CAN CARRY THEM ON THIS PIECE OF BARK !!

I ONLY HOPE THAT THE KING WAS CROSS BECAUSE HE'S HUNGRY!

WELL, IT'S MIDNIGHT AND YOU'VE DONE NOTHING LIKE EVERYONE ELSE!

BUT, YOUR MAJESTY...

YES, YES, GO ON...

WE HAVE DONE SOMETHING!! AND HERE IT IS!!

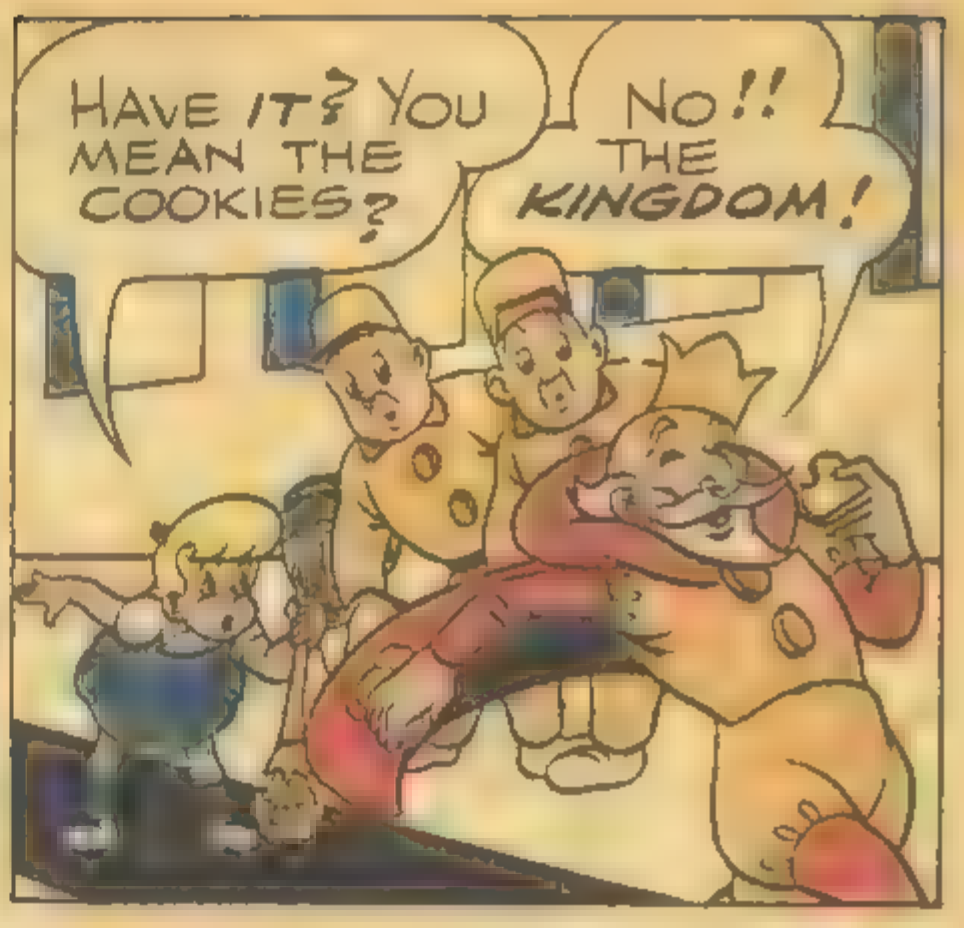
HMMM... WHAT'S THIS?

PLEASE, YOUR MAJESTY, IT'S COOKIES! THEY CAN BE EATEN BETWEEN MEALS OR ANYTIME!

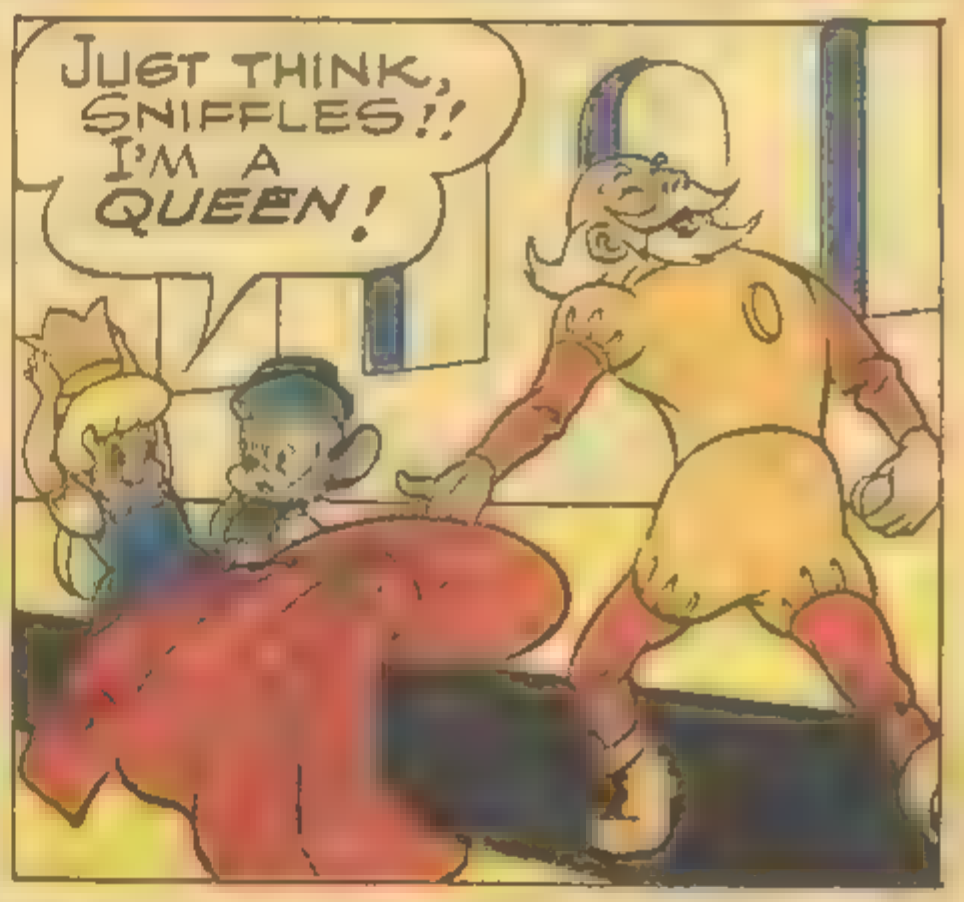
NEVER HEARD OF 'EM BEFORE! UMM-MM! DEE-LICIOUS!! THEY'RE WORTH A KINGDOM!!

SO YOU CAN HAVE IT!

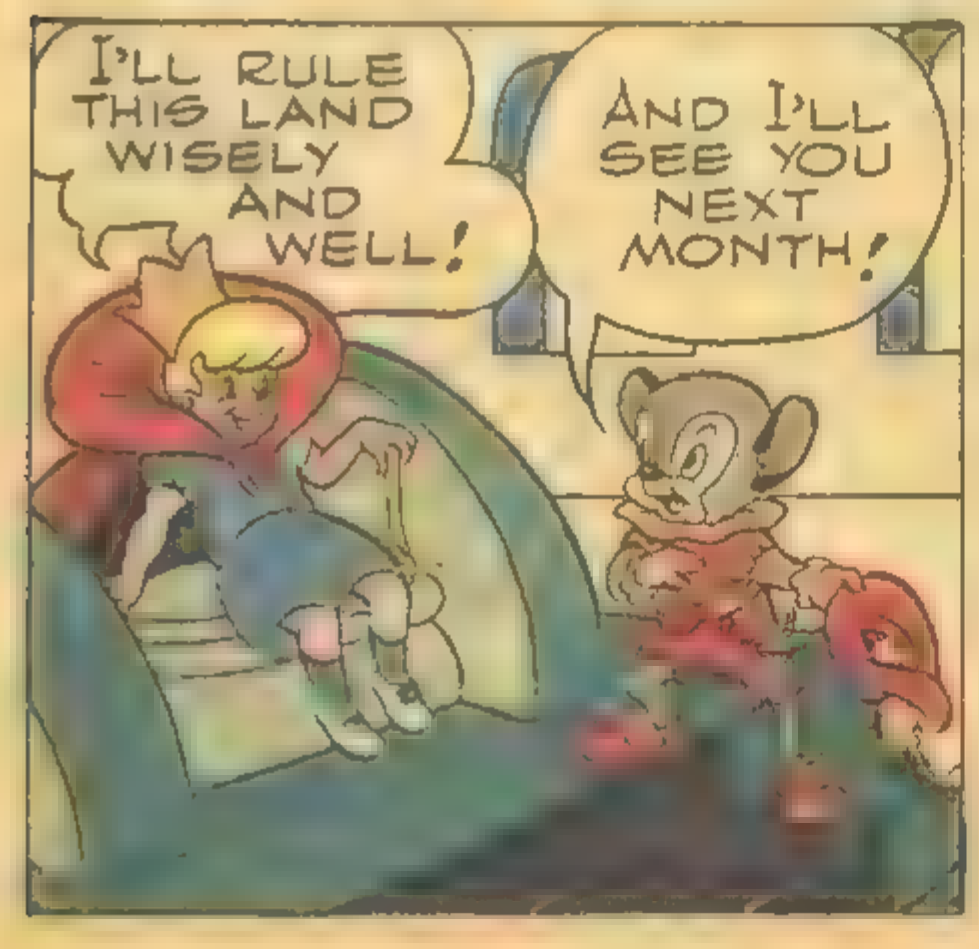


HAVE IT? YOU MEAN THE COOKIES?
NO!! THE KINGDOM!

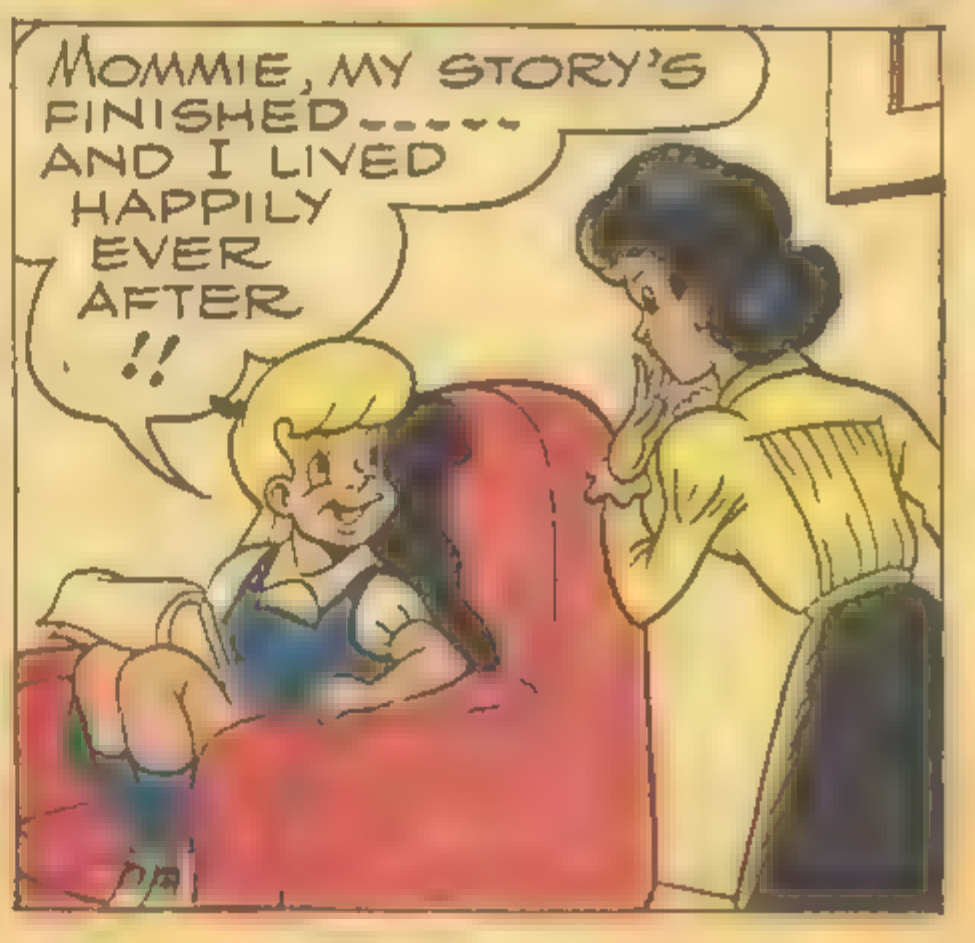
I'LL TAKE THE COOKIES AND GO FISHING!



JUST THINK, SNIFFLES!! I'M A QUEEN!



I'LL RULE THIS LAND WISELY AND WELL!
AND I'LL SEE YOU NEXT MONTH!



MOMMIE, MY STORY'S FINISHED..... AND I LIVED HAPPILY EVER AFTER !!

SING THESE WORDS

To the Tune of Yankee Doodle

Off to town Petunia rode,
Upon her little scooter;
She stuck a flower in her hat,
And then she looked much cuter!
Porky called out, "Yoo, hoo, hoo,
Yoo, hoo, hoo, I'm handy;
Let me go to town with you,
To buy a box of candy!"

Into town Petunia went,
And Porky was beside her;
He made a map to show the way,
Because he wished to guide her.
People called out, "Yoo, hoo, hoo,"
But they kept on go--ing;
Everybody that they passed,
Kept constantly hello-ing!

When in town, they shopped around,
A-spending all their money;
They bought some cake and ice cream, too;
Some candy, and some honey;
Porky called out, "Yum, yum, yum,
Yum, yum, yum, delicious!
Let's not wait to eat it
From out of your party dishes!"

PETUNIA'S VALENTINES

Petunia Pig's eyes glistened as she looked at the array of valentines spread on the counter before her. There were round ones and square ones and heart-shaped ones. Their colors dazzled her. Crimson, gold, silver, blue, green. A regular rainbow.

"I don't know which ones to choose," she confided finally to the jolly old storekeeper. "We're going to have a valentine box at school tomorrow, and I want specially pretty ones for all my friends."

"Of course you do," the storekeeper nodded. "Take your time and select the ones you want."

So Petunia took her time. Buying valentines was very important.

At last she was finished. Happily she left the store, her package of valentines tucked under her arm.

In her own room at home, Petunia spread the gay valentines on the bed. She was admiring them, when a shrill voice spoke from the doorway.

"Watcha doin', Petunia?"

Her heart sank. It was her little cousin, Cicero. Now there would be no more peace and quiet in the house. Besides, she didn't want him to see the valentines. They were a surprise and Cicero always told everything he knew

So she rushed across the room, pushed Cicero gently into the hall and firmly closed the door. "It's a secret," she told him. "You'll find out tomorrow."

"But I want to find out NOW!" little Cicero screamed loudly from the hall side of the closed door

Petunia didn't answer She merely turned the key in the lock and went back to her valentines. She smiled happily, as she tucked them into their envelopes and addressed them.

After a while Cicero tired of pounding on the door and went away

"What're you doin'?" he asked his Aunt, Petunia's mother, who was busily putting clothes in a box.

"I'm packing a box of clothes for the poor little boys and girls at the Orphans' Home Don't touch it, Cicero They'll call for the box in the morning "

"And what's Petunia doin' that's so secret?" Cicero wanted to know

"Addressing valentines, I think," she answered.

"Shucks," Cicero mumbled "Valentines!" As he spoke the word, his frown changed to a sly smile.

His hand searched his pocket and found the twenty-five cent piece his mother had given him, when she left him at Petunia's house to spend the night. Without a word to anyone, he slipped out of the front door and raced down the street to the little store, where he had seen so many valentines in the window.

That evening was very quiet in Pe-tunia's house. Petunia, herself, went to an early Girl Scout meeting and Cicero went to bed. He went without one protest, too. In fact, he was so good that his Aunt began to have hopes that Cicero might turn out to be a nice, obedient little boy, after all.

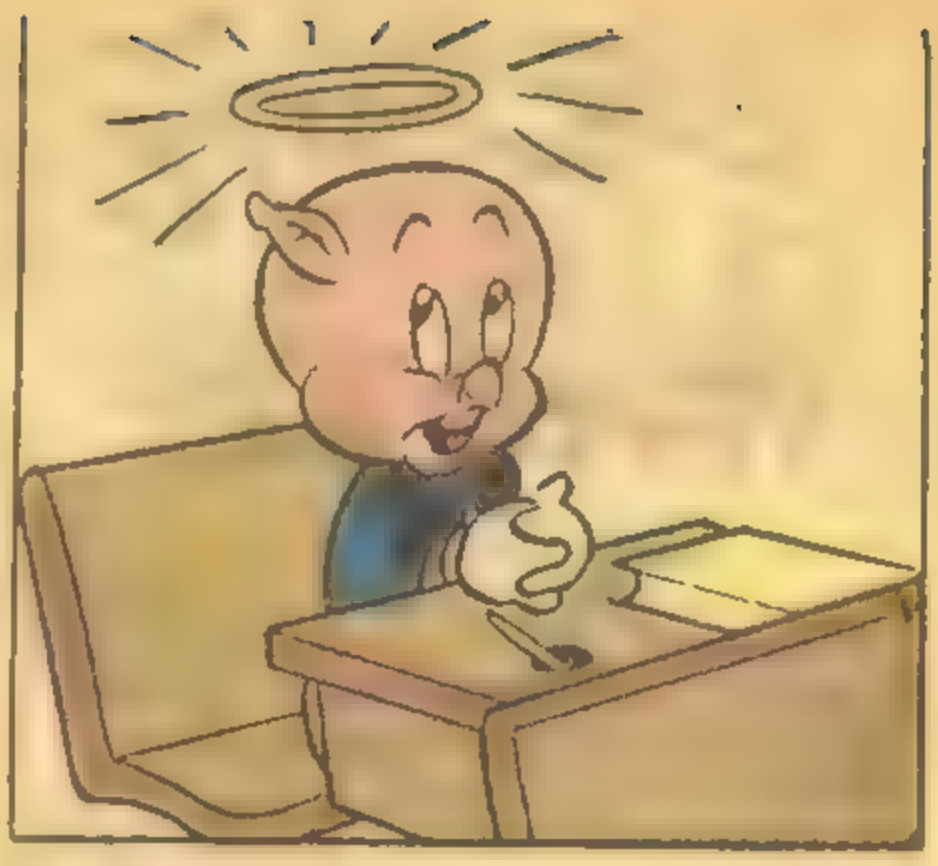
But Cicero did not stay in bed. As soon as he was alone upstairs, he slid noiselessly from under the covers and tiptoed down the hall to Petunia's room. The door was open. Cicero slipped inside and closed it without making a sound. Then he switched on the light.

After a few minutes of silent searching he found the neat pile of white envelopes. They were in the second drawer of Petunia's little desk.

A short time later Cicero returned to the darkness of his own room and crawled back into bed. There was a wide grin on his face, when he finally fell asleep.

The next morning Cicero greeted everyone with angelic smiles. He even helped Petunia get ready for school.

"You're so good, I think I'll take you to school with me, Cicero," Petunia said, gazing affectionately at her happy little cousin. "It'll be a sort of party day, anyway, with the valentine box and everything. You see, these valentines were my secret, Cicero. I have one for you, too, and I'll put it in the box with the others."



So Cicero, smiling even more brightly, trudged off to school with Petunia.

The valentine box was standing on a high stool beside Teacher's desk. It was a big carton, covered with white crepe paper and sprinkled with scarlet hearts. There was a wide slit in the top.

Quickly Petunia dropped her envelopes into the box.

The day passed slowly, because everyone was eagerly waiting for the opening of the valentine box. Cicero was so good and quiet that even Teacher praised him and paused to pat his little head, as she walked down the aisle.

Finally, early in the afternoon, Teacher rang the little bell on her desk and spoke to her class. "You may put your books and pencils away now, children. It's time for our valentines. I'll ask Petunia to be the postman. You may choose four helpers, Petunia."

Happily Petunia lifted the lid of the box. There were the valentines! Piles and piles of them, filling the carton.

The room was filled with low merry voices and the rustle of laughter, as Petunia and her four helpers distributed the envelopes. Petunia could hardly wait until they opened hers. She had been so careful to select just the right one for each friend.

Suddenly Teacher's voice rasped above the other sounds. She was opening her valentines and she held one in her hand.

"Petunia Pig!" she gasped "I never thought that you would be so rude and ill-mannered as to send a valentine like this one!"

Petunia was so shocked that she stood still, frozen in her tracks Why, she had taken special care in choosing the valentine for Teacher. It was a beautiful one with little bows of real ribbon. What could Teacher mean?

She moved stiffly, like a sleep-walker, to Teacher's side and looked at the card in her hand She could not believe her eyes! But there was her name printed in the corner And she recognized her own writing on the envelope.

It was a COMIC VALENTINE, a horrible caricature of a scrawny, homely school teacher with a long stick in her hand

"There—there's been a mistake," Petunia choked, tears in her eyes. "I didn't send you that valentine. I had a lovely one for you."

"I s-s'pose this is a m-mistake, t-too," Porky Pig called indignantly, holding up another COMIC VALENTINE, a drawing of an ugly, beady-eyed fat boy. "And I th-thought you w-were m-my f-friend!"

A chorus of other angry voices echoed Porky's words, and the bewildered Petunia looked at a dozen miserable COMIC VALENTINES which her friends were holding up

"You m-must have s-sent 'em, P-Petunia P-Pig!" Porky spluttered. "Your w-writing's on the en-envelopes and your n-name's p-printed in the c-corners"

Suddenly a light filtered through the blackness of Petunia's daze

CICERO!

She looked for her small cousin, but he had disappeared

At that moment, when Petunia was wishing that the floor would open under her feet so she could drop out of sight, the principal came into the room. Everyone stopped talking, because the principal was a very dignified person

"I wanted to tell you boys and girls about something which happened today, one of the very nicest somethings of which I have ever heard," the principal said in her pleasantest voice "I am on the board of directors of the Orphans' Home. Today we received a box of clothes for the children and, tucked among them, were many lovely valentines for the orphans This splendid, thoughtful gift was given by a little girl in this room. We are all very proud of her. She is PETUNIA PIG!"

Then Petunia understood. Cicero had put the comic valentines in her envelopes and hidden the pretty ones in the box of clothes.

When she could find her voice, Petunia asked permission to speak She told the true story of the valentines

"So I really don't deserve the credit for the gift to the Orphan's Home," she said quietly. "But, also, I didn't send the horrid ones to all of you!"

"It's an ill wind that blows no good," Teacher smiled and put her arm around Petunia "Cicero, bad as he is, has taught us a lesson. Next year we'll all send valentines to the Orphans"
